Senator Robertson. If you got too far away from where your present workers are housed, you would have a housing problem.

Mr. Dulles. I believe that 70 per cent of my people would have as easy access to this site as they do to my present site when you take account that they have to slug through the Washington traffic. I think eventually they would have easier access here. There is opposition that you will hear from some of the local residents there. They have gone to great extremes. I am supposed to be personally interested in land out there. I haven't got a foot of land. They are claiming that my sister bought an acre and a half of land out there five years ago because of this. There is a lot of rather dirty stuff going around. You will hear some of it soon. I will tell you now I have no land there. My sister owns an acre and a half of land she bought for $1200, I think, five years ago. That is the interest of the family. There were some Texas motels that were supposed to be built here. I don't know who they are and I have no interest in it.

MEMORANDUM FOR: MR. DA AS

This is an excerpt from the original transcript of the Executive Session Hearings before the Armed Services Subcommittee of the Senate Appropriations Committee in connection with the appropriation for the CIA building on Friday, 15 July 1955.

When Walter Pforzheimer and I edited this for publication these statements were deleted and do not appear in the official printed record.
